

CALL FOR PAPERS

"Iterative Learning Control"

A Special Issue of Asian Journal of Control

Papers are solicited for a Special Issue of the Asian Journal of Control on Iterative Learning Control. The aim of the special issue is to review the progress of iterative learning control (ILC) since it was originally conceived in the mid-1980s, to examine the most exciting work currently being undertaken in this area today, and to explore the more fertile avenues for future research. The breadth of scope for the special issue includes both theoretical research as well as descriptions of successful industrial applications of ILC.

Plenary talks and contributed papers from the Symposium on Learning Control at the IEEE CDC 2009 (<http://dcas.gist.ac.kr/ilc2009>) will be screened for rewriting and solicited for the special issue. However, the intent is to collect papers that represent the state-of-the-art in ILC and its connection to other fields. As such, papers that were not presented at the symposium are also strongly encouraged.
